A thousand years is but one day To those who in His presence dwell, Yet we who tarry by the way, Find every lagging moment tell. But while with us the time is long, Still, thinking of the dear ones

We know their lives are sweet with Heaven's day more perfect than its dawn.

[For the P. C. ADVERTISER.]

Deep in a mountain cleft it lies, Where nature with a lavish hand, Has spread o'er all the lovely land, Beneath the topaz-tinted skies Unfading flowers in gorgeous dyes. Here summer never faints or wanes, And softly through the forest fans

Here tropic birds on scarlet wing Flit like a flash athwart the green While in the purple deeps unseen The feathered songsters lift and sing, And warble in their merriest moods Sweet music in far-folded woods, Till all the forest-rafters ring.

Basaltic columns, grey and steep, Like to some minster tower of old, Shoot upwards from the green and gold,

Of guava forest lying deep Beneath the shade of hoary keep; And cliffs o'erhung with ferny

And wild Eugenia's crimson blooms. The white-winged waters downward

THE LOVERS.

Upon the polished silver shine The evening lamps, but more divine, The light of love shines over all; Of love, that says not mine and thine, But ours, for ours is thine and mine. They want no guests to come between Their tender glances like a screen. And tell their tales of land and sea, And whatsoever may betide The great, forgotten world outside: They want no guests; the needs must be Each other's own best company. -- Longfellow:

Why American Girls Succeed in England The alleged mystery as to how it is possible for American girls to be so successful in English society is after all no mystery, but simply owing to their self assertion. They appraise themselves highly, insist upon attention and decline to be ignored, all without the sacrifice of their dignity. The English girl does nothing of the sort, but remains to the Englishman "something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse." I have stopped at the country house of an English peer and seen twelve English gentlemen ignore the existence of twelve English ladies at dinner every evening for a week. These men hunted all day, talked nothing but hunt all dinner and played cards and billiards all evening. The fair sex were apparently a part of the furniture of the establishment and nothing more. It was pitiable to see them try to appear interested in the talk about the day's sport, asking timid questions and getting snubby answers. This party was afterward joined by an American girl. After being there two days she told me she would not stand being ignored. She would make the men talk to her and stay a little while in the drawing room after dinner -and she did. The next day when they began on their old subject 1,000 00 worth the price of admission alone. you are all blase and dying for a new sensation, and this will be very strange The Misses Moore, of Mare Isl- and weird to you." A Female Traveler.

An odd tramp who lately began her wanderings in Connecticut is Catherine not crazy. She is a professional tramp. Times. Catherine is an excellent walker, but she prefers to ride on a railroad if she can get a county selectman to forward her in that way. She says that she first started on the road from Framingham, and has crossed Relative to the recent marriage | would be glad to see her. So the select- full trot, treading out corn. -London men bought her a ticket for Norwich Tit-Bits. and put her or board of a south bound train. She is such a kind, motherly looking old woman that she had no trouble in borrowing a dollar or two of people on the street in this town. After a few days she informed Selectman Lillibridge that she "guessed she would go back to Willimantic." The selectman accordingly bought a railroad ticket for her, and she went back to that borough on the first northward bound train. No doubt the Willimantic authorities will buy another ticket for her and send her on her travels .- Norwich Letter.

Trimming Without Hats.

Women have a great many ways of "possing" the impossible, but one of the things that is denied to most of them is to make a home trimmed hat that will look like the work of a milliner. They understand just how it ought to look, but when they come to work out their understanding through their fingers the fingers show their lack of education and fail to give those deft airy touches that lend the proper air of distinction to headgear.

A shrewd milliner in New York has put forward the first bit of real helpfulness to women who must do their own hat trimming, but are nevertheless not desirous of having that fact proclaimed all hues made up with the very newest twirl and twist, securely stitched and ready to be fastened on the hat or bonnet. Some of them are designed for the only decoration, and some need feathers or other ornaments to complete them .-New York Sun.

Better Off as He Is. Max O'Rell has been guilty of saying that he hopes the next time he is born it may be as an American woman. And a writer in The Woman's Tribune answers that if he were an American woman now and had to work for half pay or less because of his sex, and if he married and should find himself owning neither his person, his children, nor the proceeds of his daily toil, and if he should find himself unable to have any voice in shaping the laws which touched him in every relation of life, being a lawn party upon the premises of taxed without representation and gov-W. O'Rell again.

Her Hard Lot. One young girl in New York city, a worker in a type foundry, nursed in succession her mother, who died of consumption, two brothers who followed her, and supported them all, when they could no longer earn wages, upon her earnings of $7.50 per week. Her father had drifted into imbecility by shock from loss occasioned by fire. When I knew her the father and daughter were all that were left of the family; and the girl cooked, washed and fed him with the tenderest care in the intervals of her work. A special calam-ity had befallen her in an attack of illness, during which time she had to obtain a substitute; but this was tided over for her and she went on bravely as before.-Jenny June's "Thrown on Her Own Resources."

Dress Reform at Kaweah. The Dress Reform league has at last appeared, but not in Chicago, where the great woman's club is devoted to dress improvement, nor in classic Boston. where the date of the dress millennium was set, but passed and found fair woman still dragging her drabbled skirts, but away out in Kaweah, Tulare county, Cal., where fifteen women adopted a short skirt, three inches below the knee. leggings to match, a shirt and blouse waist, and have worn them for some time with great comfort and convenience. The fashion is spreading; many other women in the town are gradually shortening their skirts, and others wear the reform dress at home, though they can't be induced to go in the street with it.—Exchange. A New Industry Indeed. A new industry for women is that of the manufacture of the tissue paper novelties now so popular. Twenty women are employed in a manufactory of this kind founded by two bright Buffalo women. Loops of white tissue paper caught with bunches of paper roses in Louis XVI style of decoration adorn the walls of the salesrooms, and within are all manner of paper petticoats for candles and lamps and paper roses and butter-flies through which light filters in roseate hues. The success of the enterprise is due to seizing the right moment in the popular demand.-Exchange.

A Woman's Small Laboratory. An intrepid young woman in New York city is about to enter the perfumery business. She intends starting in a very modest way, using a hall bedroom for a laboratory. One reason she gives why a woman would be likely to be more successful in the combinations of odors in perfume making is that her sense of smell is unimpaired by tobacco. And she alleges that men render themselves incapable "for that fine discrimination which is essential to an expert in this business,"-Exchange.

A Credit to Mrs. Malaprop. A certain Park avenue young lady furnished considerable amusement for her friends at a social gathering a few evenings ago.
